THERE is now but little doubt that the Go vernment of Peking will yield to the neces sities of the times and the pressure both of native and foreign opinion by sanctioning the establishment of Consulates and Legations i Western Countries as well as to send Repre sentatives to nearer powers. Some memorial of the Governors of several of the chief provinces have been published lately, which sho most conclusively that, those officials wh come into closest contact with the foreigners have been imbibing ideas which will surely tend to remove the exclusiveness with which the Imperial Government has always endeavoured to hedge itself round about. Perhaps a consciousness of its own inherent weakness has led it to cling so tenaciously to this frail defence, even more than the immemoria hatred of change which the Chinese have ever been specially distinguished for. However this may be, these memorials are very distinct evidences that outside the Imperial Councils there are many influential officials who recognise the necessity of reformation and of bringing the ancient fabric of Chinese civilisation into something more like accord with that of other and more vigorous nations These memorials are, in our estimation, perhaps the most important state papers ever made public in China. They all of them curiosity, but with a friendly eye, waiting to testify that the time has arrived when China can no longer isolate berself from the world welcome her, cordially and chearfully, into the comity of nations. when she must move with the age, and take care not to be left in the wake of other nations. The appointment of Representatives to foreign countries is openly and forcible advocated, and the policy of the special training of officials for use in foreign affairs together with the utilisation of those who have gained a knowledge of foreign usages and tongues is strongly advised. Some remarks in the memorial of the Governor Shantung are especially deserving of notice, German Ban. No collision with the whites is sum, probably as much as one half, will turn since they indicate a disinclination to be le by the literary classes, who have ever systema. tically held a hostile and contemptuous tone towards foreigners, and have been the authors of many of the collisions between them and the natives. He says:-" Since the were: Shangbai, nominal; Hongkong, 20s.; opening of relations between the Middle Singapore, 20s.; Amoy, nominal; Java, no. Mr. Albert F. Heard, the Deputy Chairman, Kingdom and outer world our literary and minal; Manila, 21s.; Yokohama, nominal; ceased to be a Director on the suspension of Kingdom and outer world, our literary and official classes have continued to cling to traditional ideas. With their pretentious talk and high flown bombastic notions, they despise foreign affairs and consider them beneath their notice, and when emergencies arise they know not how to meet them." This is a frank declaration and an outspoken is given in the advertisement. rebuke, and such an one, probably, as seldom comes from the pen of a Chinaman;

The memorialists are of opinion that Ministers should be sent to all the nationsof the West and also to Japan, Siam, Manila, Singapore, Penang, Australia, and America, in all of which there is a considerable Chinese population, to whom they might afford both protection and assistance. No doubt a Minister will also be appointed for Peru and other countries whither Chinese coolies have port on the Case of the Carisbrooks drawn up emigrated. The Madrid Imparcial states that a Chipese Consul has been approinted to Cubs, and if not un actual fact, it lar mentions, as an instance of the "us-Cube has acquired an unenviable notoriety seizure of the Carisbrooke two steamers clearing for the treatment the Chinese coolies have from the form the land large for 24 he thought he might just as well be burg showing that we have not forgotten the assistexperienced there. The arguments adduced nan, one of them doing so unmolested under the by the different memorialists are such as eyes of a Chinese Imperial gunboat.

could not fail to deeply impress the Peking Government of the great importance of this step to the interests of the Empire generally. The Governor of Fokier says, speaking of the Foreign Consuls stationed in the Treaty Ports: "They come and we do not go. In regard to knowing their affairs, we are like a man trying to see through a wall; or like an individual covering his ears and expecting to hear distant sounds." In the Southern Minister for Foreign Affairs, says, on the same subject: "By reference to the map, western countries are all separated from China by several ten thousands of lis, but foreigners are assembled like stars, or to the squares of a chess board at the different open ports. They are acquainted with every dotail relating to China, while China knows but little of foreign countries." Aud-th necessity of becoming better acquainted with the restless, powerful, and energetic foreigners has at length dawned upon these intelligent and thinking officials. They have, it inust be remembered, seen more of the foreigners than those officials whose duty keeps them near the Court, and consequently have better opportunities of maturing an opinion on such questions. It is strange that European example should have been so long peneconceit; but it is gratifying to find that slowly. - And this has been almost im- 80th May. perceptibly accomplished, in spite of the bitter hostility to foreign institution and ingrained hatred of innovation which the Government have always shown. Circumstances have proved too strong for the Imperial Ministers. Their own chosen and trusted officials have come forward as the champions of change! Too weak to offer a resolute and determined resistance to the impending revolution of manners, customs, habits, and ideas which is inevitably dawning upon the ancient land further discussion of the best mouns of carrying of China, the Government is obliged to drift, however unwillingly, with the current. Now and then it feebly tries to stem the tide, but don the rendezvous system proposed the other with indifferent and at the best temporary day, as it was found to be objectionable in success. Seldom, however, has it yielded with a good grace, or given the Imperial to the effect that within the last fow days a anction with an appearance of spontaneity. After all, this is not so very unnatural. Apart from the dislike which this despotic Government entertains to all change, there is no doubt it views with no slight apprehension the progressive ideas which are being introduced into the Middle Kingdom through " HALL& HOLTZ and KELLY the agency of the foreigner. They are powerless to arrest the rush of events, and they have hitherto bent to it. In giving their assent to the last great change proposed, they have done so with unusual reluctance. The off-repeated advice of foreign Ministers has utterly failed to convince them that the sending of Representatives to foreign countries would conduce to the weal of the subjects of the EMPEROR or to the maintenance of the dignity of the country. It wanted some sterner pressure from without and the counsel of friends within to bring about such a consummation. The step once resolved on, the Government will doubtless strive to make it apparent that the act had its incoption in the unparalleled wisdom of the counsellers who surround the Dragon Throne

But the credit they should get ought to limited to that given to a Government who concedes what it has become dangerous highly impolitic to refuse. It may perchance turn out, however, that the lumbering old Government will prove a useful drag in the future upon the coach of Chinese progress. It has proceeded very sluggishly heretofore, it is true, but it may be about to take a sudden and surprising start. Even now there are plenty of Chinamen who are at heart deeply imbued with an emulous desire to compete with Europeans in trade and commerce. Who can say that this will not by and bye develop into a rivalry in manufactures, the arts, and, possibly, the science war? If Chinamen go in considerable numbers, as it is probable they will some day, to the great cities of Europe, they will be able although, he says, possibly a portion may be to contrast their vaunted civilisation with recovered. We understand that the local authorities have issued a proclamation forbidding the illegal combination of coolies engaged in shipping off teas from the foreign hongs. Nearly all these men, we believe, belong to guilds; they portion off the foreign settlement into districts, and will not permit outsiders to work therein. In one of these districts, the coolies struck for double wages, at the commencement of the present Teaseason; a demand which was foolishly, we think, acceded to. A very short time elapsed, and the same body of men again struck for higher pay; on the second occasion, however, they were not quite so successful; representations were made o the Authorities, and the men were compelled to fall back upon the old rate of pay. In England, a strike could not be so easily settled, out there more might be said in favor of the mon. who are, as a rule, unable to aubsist upon their wages; while in this country, the coolie is not only able to maintain bimself and family in a style adepted to the olimite, but is also enabled to save money from his pay.
